THURSDAY, JANUARY 17, 1907

CARLISLE, like a burnt child, dreads the fire. More bonds, to him, has an ominous sound.

It can be had for the asking, all the Democratic Presidential nomination in 1906.

The republicans of this state should hold an early convention and they eventually will for this writing everything points that way.

The Sturge's Enterprise has changed its name and has changed its management, but the politics of the paper remains unchanged. H. A. Card, a gentleman of considerable newspaper experience has charge and what was once the Enterprise is now the Ledger.

This year there are more Kentucky aspirants for State office than in any year since 1892. This fact alone bespeaks well for the State's future, politically. If it is God's will that the Democrats in Kentucky be turned down next November, there is no power on earth to prevent the turning down.

Under the Gorman tariff many farmers are given free wool, but the poor laborer is given starvation wages. These are the New Year's gifts of the dishonest old Democracy. Benefits to the rich corporations, but nothing to the poor, that is the policy of the wage earner; and there are millions of poor unemployed workmen suffering in this country to-day from cold, who are unable to buy the cheap wool of the cheaply made Democratic. Their loss of work is the result of the theft of Cleveland, Gorman and Wilson.

It has just come to light that an Alabama woman, who was kissed, proceeded to raise a fuss about it. The particulars are about as follows: "She was a passenger on the Louisville and Nashville train, and on the day of the other day; so were a young couple just married. The train was passing through a tunnel and the groom, who had left his wife's seat, just behind this lady, returned to it, as he thought in the darkness, and proceeded to kiss his newly wedded bride. About this time the train emerged from the tunnel and disclosed that his supposed bride was a young widow, and the young widow was worth $10,000, damages for the mistake and will not admit that the act was not intentional.

It can be truthfully said that the republicans of this state are preparing for an aggressive fight in the next state campaign. All quiet in the Louisville market, a willingness, and several well known their intention to run for the various state offices. Grayson is a candidate for State Treasurer in Gen. W. L. Loebe. Mr. Loebe has declared himself a candidate for that office subject to the action of the State Convention. Hon. N. B. Chambers, a prominent young member of the bar of Hancock County has announced his candidacy for Register of the Land Office of Kentucky subject to the action of his party. A ticket headed by Hon. W. O. Bradley for governor and, for the various other offices, met with the stamp of these just named will more than make our Democratic friends bestir themselves in the next campaign.

An Unusual Order.
British trade papers are noticing that the Johnson Company of Ohio have given Galloway, Limited, of Manchester, an order for a pair of roller mill engines, which are probably as large as any that have ever been made in connection with roller plant. One of the papers, with that brutal frankness that they assume when disgusted with the provincial spirit which is played by American Free-Trade, says: "Such an order this from the United States is very unusual, as it is certain that roller mill engines have never been brought to a very high degree of perfection.

The order, as said, is very unusual and the circumstances are unusual. A man with more than average business ability has been secured, from England, some one who is a great thinker. He is the character of a philosopher he goes to Manchester and engages machinery to enable him to manufacture iron and steel in Ohio. No man in America will get any more out of this move, nor will any American storekeeper sell goods to the people who earn wages and profit from the making of the engines. All those dealers go to Louisville with the money that have been brightened so many times in these hard times.

A Different Way of Doing Things.
Henry Clay Evans, November last, elected Governor of Tennessee. Of that there is no reasonable doubt. That he was elected on the face of the returns, there is no possible shadow of doubt. Nobody ventures to dispute it. He is therefore entitled to be seated as Governor of the State. But he is a Republican and Tennessee has been a Democratic State. The Democratic leaders who are now in the State have a different way of doing things. They are planning to keep him out of the office to which he was elected. Of this purpose they make no secret, and they are actually at this time in their attempt to put it into effect.

James H. Budd was on the same day in November elected Governor of California. He was elected, we see no reason to doubt. Beyond question he was elected on the face of the returns. He was therefore entitled to take his seat as Governor. He is, however, a Democrat, and California is a Republican State. Indeed, it is the very election that made it a Republican State. The idea of installing him as Governor was therefore distasteful to the men who were in power. The idea of installing him as Governor was therefore distasteful to the men who were in power. The idea of installing him as Governor was therefore distasteful to the men who were in power.

The above is the true statement of affairs as they exist in Tennessee and California. Similar in one respect but widely different in another. What would Jackson, the founder of the "poor's" Democracy (but few of the Jeffersonian kind) say to his followers in Tennessee, who propose to steal the government of that state? What could he say to his followers in Tennessee, who propose to steal the government of that state? What could he say to his followers in Tennessee, who propose to steal the government of that state?

No exponent of democracy in this (Hopkins) county has yet seen fit to endorse any act committed by the New York followers of the young widow. After giving any opinion whatever, bearing upon this matter, been expressed by this noble defender of Democratic principles. In line of duty any expression should be made no matter what the effect might be in the general result.

An Old Story Retold.
The opportunities offered the importers of silks by the "Perfidy and Dishonor" Tariff are numerous, and they are being taken advantage of to the fullest extent. Undervaluations are now a matter of course and an honest man has no show. Through the medium of resident agents the foreign manufacturer floods the market at prices limited only by the greed of the custom house broker as a "wearer." Invoices that are correct as being correct, when in fact they are not, are being used to the advantage of the importer and a continually expanding loss to the taxpayers of the United States. The direction must make good the loss of revenues.

THE PRESIDENT'S IMMEDIATE family, but there is no room to devote to the Nation's hospitality, and in entertaining traveling dignitaries this quarters them at a hotel. For the large reception hall, the space is insufficient, for the official part of the President's family is exactly as it was a hundred years ago. Mr. Cleveland has taken the bull by the horns in his castle, and he has secured a house out of town, to which he goes even when there is an important state paper to prepare. But this temporary arrangement does not solve the question for the future. It is to be hoped some President, in defiance of philistine sentiment, will fess and fess and fess until something is done to improve the condition of the abject old house which is a disgrace to a great and rich Nation.

National Capital.

(From Our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 14, 1905.
The quid nuncs have had a toothsome morsel in the episode of Mr. Cleveland's quest for Mr. Hill. See many other tongues wagging besides his own when he dined at the White House. And no event has stirred political Washington so much as the unexpected arrival of New Year. The occasion was the first state dinner of the season, the members of the Cabinet being the special guests of honor. It is the improbable that always happens in the case of the President's dinner. He is not a man who is easily surprised. He is not a man who is easily surprised. He is not a man who is easily surprised.

Will, it is not natural that his relatives should inherit something in personal appearance from him? I reasoned that if David had a ruddy, florid complexion, why could not Christ have pretty much the same. This hair, instead of being black or light colored bristles, must have been of a chestnut hue to make his complexion fair, therefore, described him as having hair as ruddy as tint with a reddish glow when the sun shined on it. His eyes are dark blue and large, and his complexion clear and at times pale.
